TESTO N. 48

Special Statue in Manchester

Scientists wanted to find out the reason for this. They set up a camera and something that measured vibrations. The camera captured the statue over a long period of time. When the scientists had pictures, they could see it moving. It turned out that the statue rotates during the busiest hours of the day, especially around 6 and 7 o'clock in the morning and 6 o'clock in the evening. The statue rotates because of vibration and at these times, the vibrations are the strongest.

A boy stops a bus

A 13-year-old student from Michigan, United States, is a hero. He saved 66 students when their school bus driver lost consciousness. The incident was caught on video, which showed the driver messaging officials about feeling unwell. Then she passed out. Dillon Reeves was sitting five rows back and he noticed the driver's distress. He quickly jumped to the front and took control of the wheel. He stopped the bus and called for emergency assistance. It is not clear what caused the driver to become sick. She had no previous incidents while driving. Dillon's quick thinking and decisive action prevented a possible crash. Local officials and the community praised him and his parents expressed both shock and pride.

TESTO N. 50

Tokyo micro-apartments

In the Japanese capital Tokyo, the so-called micro-apartments are a popular place for young people to live. These apartments have just nine square meters and they are very simple. There are very few amenities and very little space to keep just everything you need. Monthly rent is 380 to 610 dollars, and it depends on where exactly in Tokyo the apartment is. Micro-apartments are so popular with young people because they don't have enough money for a bigger apartment. Many people come to live in Tokyo from other towns and they need a cheap place to stay. One benefit is that landlords don't usually ask for any deposit.

Batteries for electric cars

Volkswagen, the biggest carmaker in Europe, plans to invest in mines to make batteries for electric cars. Carmakers don't want to rely on third parties which supply energy and raw materials. They want to become more independent and get better control over the supply chain. Carmakers also need to meet EU targets for electrification, but raw materials which they need for batteries are rare and mines have limited capacity. The biggest carmakers like Tesla and Volkswagen are looking for ways how to make electric cars cheaper.

TESTO N. 35

Mission to Jupiter

The Jupiter Icy Moons Explorer spacecraft took off on a long journey from a spaceport in French Guiana. The spacecraft is part of a mission by the European Space Agency to explore three of Jupiter's moons that could support life in the past. The mission's goal is to discover more about Jupiter's Great Red Spot, the polar auroras, the magnetic field, and how it impacts its moons. These moons are called Europa, Callisto, and Ganymede. Although they are far from the sun and are covered in ice, they have large oceans of liquid water beneath the surface. After scientists discovered the oceans, they wanted to explore these moons for signs of life. If there are hydrothermal vents on the ocean floor like on Earth, they could provide enough heat for life to exist.

TESTO N. 45

Business world news

These are some of the world's most important business news of this week. One year ago, Russia invaded Ukraine, which changed the global business and energy market, and inflation rose in many countries. Politicians and military leaders met in Munich, Germany, to discuss further help to Ukraine. It seems that Europe may get out of recession because business activity is increasing. The European Central Bank is waiting for the latest data from stock markets. It will probably keep rising rates because inflation is very high. In 2020, G20 countries agreed to change the debt payments of the poorest countries. This week, 20 finance ministers met to discuss debt payments of middle-income countries and the possibility of forgiving debts after the pandemic.

PROVA ESTRATTA

TESTO N. 47

Rare minerals in Europe

Swedish company LKAB found more than one million tons of rare minerals in the north of the country. No other deposit of these minerals exists in Europe, and Europe fully depends on China and Russia for them. These minerals are necessary to make electric cars, wind turbines, and electronics, and the global demand for them is growing. When the new mine opens, everything will change for people there. Europe will become self-sufficient, and it will make these products with much less transportation and pollution.
